

WHAT IS CLAIMED IS:

1. A communication apparatus for receiving a predetermined service from another apparatus on a network, comprising:

5        an extraction unit for extracting information of a proper device capable of providing the predetermined service from information on the apparatus on the network; and

10        list forming means for forming a list of numbers acquired by the proper device included in the information extracted by said extraction unit.

2. A communication method of receiving a predetermined service from another apparatus on a network, comprising steps of:

15        extracting information of a proper device capable of providing the predetermined service from information on the apparatus on the network; and 20        forming a list of numbers acquired by the proper device included in the information extracted by said extraction unit.